

ABSTRACT

- 5 A timing delay generator for supplying a signal delayed by a predetermined period comprises a vernier that provides variable delays for a main signal, the delays being sensitive to temperature variation, a sensor for sensing the vernier's temperature and a feedback loop to maintain the temperature of the silicon die at a constant level and thus, to provide the high long-term accuracy of the timing delay generator.